

JAMAICA

The Coat of Arms

The original Coat of Arms granted to Jamaica in 1661, was designed by the then Archbishop of Canterbury, William Sandcroft. Apart from a partial revision in 1957, it remains virtually the same as was originally designed.

The Arms shows a male and female Arawak, standing on either side of the shield which bears a red cross with five golden pineapples superimposed on it. The Crest is a Jamaican crocodile surmounting the Royal Helmet and Mantlings. The original Latin motto, "Indus Uterque Serviet Uni", has been changed to one in English: "Out of Many, One People".

Produced by Publications Department, Jamaica Information Service, 58A Half Way Tree Road, Kingston 10, Jamaica, W.I.

Photographs: Garth Morgan; Leroy McPherson. Designed and created by Leroy McPherson. Lithographed in Jamaica by Lithographic Printers Limited.